Claim Egyptian Drive To Be Accompanied by Further
"Blows Against British"By Percy Winner
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

ROME, Oct. 15—Important developments are rushing toward a climax in the eastern Balkans, but Soviet Russia has been informed in advance and is not "alarmed," informed quarters in Rome declared today.

The Balkan maneuvers were said to be taking place behind a double smokescreen of intensified German air attacks on England and an Italian offensive against Egypt due to be started in short order.

Authoritative quarters said the Egyptian drive will be accompanied by further "blows against the British fleet" in the Mediterranean.

Diplomatic circles attached great importance to impending political developments.

Meat Cutters Strike
Causes Stores To Close

The four chair stores in Bristol were closed today due to a strike called by the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butchers Workmen of North America.
Due to the strike of the meat cutters,
it was stated locally that those employed in the grocery and other departments of the stores were prevented from going to work.

The two Acme Markets, the one
American Store and the one A & P
Super Market were all closed and business suspended.

Pickets carrying placards walked back and forth in front of the establishments.

The strike came after the three firms, individually, according to union officials, had refused a new contract which the union offered on Oct. 1,
when its old contract expired.

Principal demands were that the 51 hours a week be reduced to 48, that two weeks' vacation with pay be granted instead of one, and that an increase in wages of $2.50 per week be allotted meat cutters.

At present, meat cutters average $32.50 a week. The managers and assistant managers of the meat departments are not affected by the proposed changes.

Expect Mounting Death Toll
In Berlin

Berlin, Oct. 15—A mounting death toll in western Berlin was expected today in the wake of British bombers which attacked Germany during the night and early today, it was officially announced this afternoon.

With a known death toll of one,
Berlin officials "feared several persons were dead, buried under debris of a number of apartment houses in western Berlin where a large number of persons were seriously injured," an announcement said.

Declaring that one German night-flying pursuit plane had been lost, an official statement declared four explosions rocked Birsow Hospital, wrecking the maternity and surgical wards.

Another announcement said units of the German air force have been flying toward England since early this morning and "at present are successfully attacking London railway stations."

215th London Raid Short

London, Oct. 15—A brief new air raid alarm sounded in London today, the fourth since morning and the 215th since war began, but there was little activity before the all-clear signal was given.

made determined attempts to pierce England's southeast coast and the Thames estuary defenses but in most instances were driven back.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

Fortunate Alternative

Washington, Oct. 14.
INEFFICIENCY is the really serious and unanswerable indictment made
by the dictators
against the de-mocracies. It is true that a considerable amount of inefficiency is
the price we pay—and it is worth it—for the individual liberty inherent
in our form of government.

FRANCE did not collapse nor is England today desperately fighting for her life because the leaders of those countries were evil or sinister, but only because, under their control, their governments did not do their jobs even reasonably well.
They were not the men to make democracy work. They were the men who couldn't make it work.

Manor. The Rev. Edward Stapleton of-

ing as organist.

nison in charge. Eleven tables of pi-nochle players were arranged and high scores were won by: Mrs. William

$3,000 fire which broke out in the tar heating buildings at the stone crushing plant and quarries of Samuel M. Yoder.
Estate, about 4.45 o'clock Friday afternoon, near Blooming Glen.

Chief Lloyd Y. Crouthamel, of Dublin, who said the fire destroyed the tar heating equipment and the small buildings in which it was housed, explained that firemen had to stand by while the current in a high tension electric line, carrying 13,000 volts, was turned off because no stream of water could be used in fighting the blaze until the wires were dead.

Firemen worked bravely to extinguish the fire which destroyed the top of the stone crushers which were enclosed under a wooden roof. Water was obtained from the quarries.

The fire, which was discovered by one of the employees, broke out while tar was being heated and mixed in order to make a road surface preparation.

Due to the good supervision of the firemen no one was injured in fighting the blaze which was dangerous because of the high voltage lines and streams
of water which serve as conductors.

Working on double shifts and 16
hours a day, employees of Oscar Anderson, contractor, who is building the new cement highway between Kulp's Corner, north of Dublin, and Doylestown, are making good progress.

Three bridges, two of which are in this stretch, north of Doylestown to the intersection of Routes 113, 313 and 413, where they join the Quakertown cement highway, have been completed.

The third bridge is located on the highway, south of Dublin toward Doylestown.

It was reported that the "fill-in" on the upper neck of the road toward Kulp's Corner has been completed, and that it will be ready for traffic before long.

Residents of Dublin, terribly handicapped by the detour, report that it is now 11 miles to Doylestown, when it used to be about five.

Efficient work on the part of firemen from at least six communities prevented what might have been the total destruction of the Parkland bungalow colony.

The fire, which for a time threatened to destroy the 35 bungalows, all of which are built closely together, had its origin in a bungalow owned and occupied by William Street, whose loss not only included the dwelling, but also all of the furnishings.

Two adjoining bungalows were also ignited and damaged to some extent, but they were saved by firemen from Langhorne, South Langhorne, Hulme-ville, Trevose, Heights and Newtown.

Fearing that their dwellings might also be doomed, occupants of seven other bungalows carried their furniture out.

AUTO PIONEER DIES

Passing of Freeman O. Stanley, surviving twin of the pair which created the Stanley Steamer, will bring to many a pioneer motorist a recollection of a controversy which raged after the turn of the century over the comparative merits of steam and gasoline automobiles.

The Stanleys' first creation—the original was built for themselves, and copied for venturesome friends—was powered with a simple plant, a vertical fire-tube boiler giving an abundance of steam to run a two-cylinder engine at 400 revolutions a minute. But there was no condenser, and so 25 miles was about as far as the early steamer could go without taking on water.

The addition of a condenser and other improvements and refinements presently produced a vehicle of which it was popularly thought that no one knew how fast it could travel, so much in excess of its requirements was its potential power. It was economical and a great hill climber, and devotees of the Stanley and the White insisted that riding in them all day was less tiring than touring in their gasoline contemporaries.

But the gasoline car had its own advantages, else it would not have prevailed. The steamer called for a larger knowledge of mechanics, and more watchfulness and care, and it was not immune to fouling, an inescapable factor in steam plant operation. White got from under in 1912, but the Stanleys went on producing until the World War.

Their product earned many friends and admirers who to this day will argue those superiorities of the steam passenger automobile which have long since become abstractions.

ATLANTIC PATROL FORCE

Although it may be several years before the United States has a fleet that can be described accurately as "a two-ocean navy," this can be anticipated to some extent by reorganization of the nation's present ship strength. This has already been started by a Navy Department order merging all ships and planes in the Atlantic into a single unit under one commander. The new naval force will be known as "the patrol force of the United States fleet."

The order brings 125 ships of various types and several hundred warplanes under the central authority of Rear Admiral Hayne Ellis, present commander of the Atlantic squadron. Besides this squadron, vessels now engaged in the neutrality patrol, re-commissioned and converted ships and several craft now building will be prepared for co-ordinated action.

For the time being, no immediate emergency being expected, this naval force will be sufficient for Atlantic duty, leaving the main body of the fleet to continue its operations in the Pacific. Among other things, this new arrangement serves notice on Japan that the United States is putting its Eastern coastal and water defenses into shape without depleting the Pacific fleet.

THAT is the charge against Mr. Roosevelt, and it is a charge for which none but a demagogic defense is possible. It is because he has been guilty of these things that today, in the midst of a great world crisis which menaces our security and calls for the expenditure of many billions of dollars for its defense, we find ourselves in an extended and enfeebled state, unfit to stand the coming strain and unprepared for the unavoidable sacrifices. Our finances are in an alarmingly confused condition. They have been out of control for seven years. There has been a vast and unbroken accumulation of deficits. The debt has reached staggering proportions. Although the already heavy taxes will be heavily increased by the bill just enacted, revenues will fall many millions short of meeting the normal operating governmental expenses. No provision whatever has been made for meeting the immense new armament appropriations.

THE threat of a ruinous inflation, which is the inevitable consequence of an uncontrolled Treasury, oppresses every thoughtful citizen but seems as yet not to have seeped through to the unthinking masses upon whose support Mr. Roosevelt has traded but who in the end will be the worst victims of his incompetency. This situation is too clear to admit of denial. The unemployment problem is completely unsolved. Neither industry nor agriculture is prosperous. The WPA and relief rolls are swollen to great size. There are 10,000,000 people deriving part or all of their income from Government checks. The Federal jobholders now number more than a million, and the country is full of class hatred stirred up by New Deal policies.

IN THE face of this extraordinary and indisputable record, and in defiance of American tradition, Mr. Roosevelt seeks a third term. When the facts are calmly considered, his candidacy is almost unbelievable. It is, of course, the war—and only the war—that gives him his chance of success. It enables him to ig-

When a moving picture stunt man can save his life by one of his stunts, he's really a stunt man.

Carey Loftin, while en route to do some stunts for the hillbilly musical, "Grand Ole Opry," had a head-on collision between his motorcycle and a car. Just as the motorcycle and car crashed, Loftin jumped into the air, sailed over the top of the car, and landed on the ground in back of the tail light.

This stunt which saved his life was the same one he was planning to do in "Grand Ole Opry," which opens at the Ritz Theatre today.

"Out West With The Peppers" is also being shown.

BACKS STEAL THE LIMELIGHT IN LOWER BUCKS GRID PLAY, WITH MAKUKA'S THREE SCORES PUTTING CLINCHER ON HIS ABILITY

Great Burlington Back Dashes Way for Scores of 70, 60 and 30 Yards Over Morrisville As Two Bristol Backs Team Up in 100-Yard Thriller Against Conshohocken Eleven

(By JACK W. GILL)

A deceptive, sleek, elusive whirling dervish type of back sent Lower Bucks schoolboy grid devotees home humming loud praises Saturday. Not connected with any conference school, the "fancy dan" back of the day was none other than the great Makuka, of Burlington High School, who pranced his way to a few scores over a Morrisville eleven that crumbled and withered like a wilted rose in the face of his attack.

If there was ever a one-man thrust, this boy Makuka is it. Quite naturally he depends upon his mates up front to do a bit of blocking for him, but the offensive blocking by Burlington isn't of the best.

Yet behind that line Makuka operates with an amazing machine-like degree of precision. Built as big as the average ball carrier, he can spot any slight opening and slice his way through. There were no noticeably immense openings in the large Morrisville line, Saturday, yet the kid in the leather mask slipped through like a slippery cake of soap often.

It wasn't so much what the boy accomplished in the course of one afternoon, which, incidentally, was enough, but the manner in which the star impressed. No fan failed to sing his praises. It may be remembered that he was highly touted in local papers before the fray. He could have slithered and had an off day. But they talk highly of this boy in the leather mask and thus far he hasn't had one of those bad afternoons. He is not a hard-charging, low, line-crashing type of back, but rather a slick smoothie.

Consistency, the mark that all good backs try to hit, is one of Makuka's best attributes. No flash in the pan, he showed enough to make almost any progressive college coach's eyebrow flicker.

Delving deep down into his style of play, it seemed that the boy possessed two outstanding habits. One is his fleetness; the other a pair of sharp eyes. Some runners merely hit a line. Makuka picks his openings and darts either to his left or right. On cut-backs he is marvelous.

Unlike the average scholastic ball carrier who needs anywhere from five to eight yards of territory once he passes the line of scrimmage, Makuka adeptly showed that he required only about four. Once he steps foot into the secondary he can elude many a wing and tailback by slick locomotion. His 72-yard sprint off tackle was as pretty a picture play as any fan would want to witness. He did it again for thirty. In fact, the guy kept doing it all afternoon, much to the disgust of Johnny Hoffman and the Bulldog eleven.

Newtown Pulls Surprise

Placing the emphasis on the pitch-catch combination of Clarence Pidcock to limber Al Driver, Friday's paper wasn't far wrong in tabbing the thoroughness of the two Newtown backs.

Outstanding even in defeat, Newtown's passing attack nearly set Morrisville crazy in the first conference fray of the season. At the outset it was clearly evident that the two boys could inflict damage in a closely-contested game.

Thus the stunning slip of Bensalem that may later cost them the league title. Thus far in district play there has been a noticeable scarcity of speedy wingmen and backfield ball toters. Driver, however, is an exception. With left-handed Pidcock, an able baseball player, doing the tossing, the lean negro can dart downfield and behind the scrutinizing pass defense.

That is the main secret of passing success. An end who can shake the enemy off and get loose and a rifle-armed ball hawk in the backfield complete the set-up. With the Indians, whose last period pitch enabled them to tie the game, it is strictly high school stuff. Long and short heaves intermixed with a few running plays. It is not spot passing, comparable to that in college play, where perfect timing co-ordinates to spell success. Here the ball and the player must meet. With Newtown, excellent natural ability between two boys has done the trick.

They're still chanting the praises of Driver's grandstand catch and of Krusen, who was the "little man standing there" when a host of Owl spoilers batted an extra point pass right into his outstretched arms.

Individual Fents Shine

In all, Saturday's local picture, spiced by beautiful football weather that lured large gatherings all over, was one of sparkling individual accomplishment.

Even Bristol came through with a smart play, undoubtedly one of the most sensational of the day, when Spezzano and Di Angelo teamed together on a cute trick that was good for almost the full-fledged net yardage of 100 yards.

Spezzano pulled a smart thinking act when, after he had intercepted a Conshohocken aerial on his own goal line, he lateralized to his mate, Chick DiAngelo, to avoid being tackled near midfield. This will go down as a touchdown for DiAngelo, but you have to hand Spezzano an assist on the play. Bristol once again had the better of the afternoon, statistically, but they cannot shake the tough luck that has been pursuing them all season.

Makuka was definitely the back of the day. He was Lower Bucks' Tom Harmon. Pidcock and Driver lived up to this department's pre-game expectations. For Bensalem, Hank Kian did noble work. Then, of course, and must be given to Spezzano. And as October's weather becomes more crisp and the leaves start to turn a brilliant hue, it appears as though the backs of the section have finally hit their stride.

Four Draft Boards Named To Handle Draft In County

Appeal agent; Dr. Myron W. Harris, Langhorne; Physician: Dr. Charles M. Thompson, Newtown.

Board No. 3: Edward Fell, Holliston; Joshua P. Borden, New Hope; Robert L. Clymer, Doylestown. Appeal agent: Arthur M. Eastburn, Doylestown. Physician: Dr. William I. Westcott, Doylestown.

Board No. 4: Clarence A. G. Pease, Quakertown; Edward H. Kackline, Perkassie; Alexander Miller, Jr., Sellersville. Appeal agent: Donald B. Smith, Perkassie. Physician: Dr. William G. Moyer, Quakertown.

For the purpose of setting up local draft boards to handle the work of conscripting men into the army after they have registered tomorrow the entire county has been divided.

The division is based on population, so that the board has under its supervision a district in which there are more than 30,000 persons.

Local boards are not to be confused with the registration boards. Registration boards will be comprised of the regular election boards and will operate only tomorrow to list the names of all men of draft age, from 21 to and including 35.

The local draft boards will operate later, when the actual drawing of names for conscription will begin under the "selective system."

Names of registered persons that are drawn will be forwarded to their respective local boards, and the local boards will notify and examine all persons summoned for service. After the "candidate" appears before the local board and is approved his next step will be into the army, unless he is granted exemption or is rejected.

Like the registration boards, the local draft boards will serve without pay.

The Bucks County board will serve the following areas:

Local Board No. 1: Bensalem, Bristol borough and township, Falls, Tullytown. Population, 24,487.

Local Board No. 2: Hulmeville, Ivyland, Langhorne, Langhorne Manor, Lower Makefield, Lower Southampton, Middletown, Morrisville, Newtown borough and township, Northampton, South Langhorne, Upper Makefield, Upper Southampton, Warminster, Warrington, Wrightstown, Yardley. Population, 24,741.

Local Board No. 3: Bedminster, Buckingham, Chalfont, Doylestown borough and township, Dublin, Hilltown, New Britain borough and township, New Hope, Plumstead, Silverdale, Solebury, Tinticum, Telford. Population, 22,258.

Local Board No. 4: Bridgeton, Durham, East Rockhill, Haycock, Milford, Nockamixon, Perkassie, Quakertown, Richland, Richlandtown, Reigelsville, Sellersville, Springfield, Trumbauersville, West Rockhill. Population, 24,241.

Kilenyi Given Ovation At Concert Here

Displaying excellent technique, he gave fine tonal presentations of the immortal music of Bach, Beethoven, Chopin, Liszt, and others.

Showing magnificent mastery of his art, this famous youthful pianist, held the more than 600 in attendance at the concert in Bristol high school auditorium, breathless.

A student of the great Ernst von Dohnanyi from his eighth year, Kilenyi received a great ovation here. His first group of numbers were two choral preludes by Bach; and Sonata in C Major, Opus 53 (Waldstein) by Beethoven.

In his next presentations were "Included Nocturne in C sharp minor, Opus 27, No. 1, and Sonata in B flat minor, Opus 35, both works of Chopin. Dohnanyi, Bartok, Debussy, and Liszt were the musicians whose offerings were presented by Kilenyi last evening, during the third part of the program. In their order the numbers were Ruralla Hungarica, Two Burlesques, two preludes, and Mephisto Waltz.

One local music critic said today in speaking of this "first-class pianist," that "He has perfect technique. This was especially evident in the Chopin numbers, and likewise the Liszt number. Kilenyi was particularly brilliant with his left hand. . . . He seemed to have caught the spirit of the modern school in the Debussy number. And he was likewise fine in the von-Dohnanyi 'Ruralla Hungarica' as von-Dohnanyi was his master."

"The pianist's technique improved as the program advanced, and he captured the hearts of his audience as he gave among his encores a Minute Waltz by Chopin, a very familiar selection. I think he was particularly outstanding, however, in the Chopin Sonata in B flat Minor, Opus 35. He seemed to have caught the spirit of the thing."

To Mrs. William Dufamel, vice-president of the Bristol Cooperative Concert Association, was accorded the honor of presenting Mr. Kilenyi to the Bristol audience.

Autumn leaves, chrysanthemums and palms enhanced the auditorium with their bright colors.

Russian Troop Movements Renewed

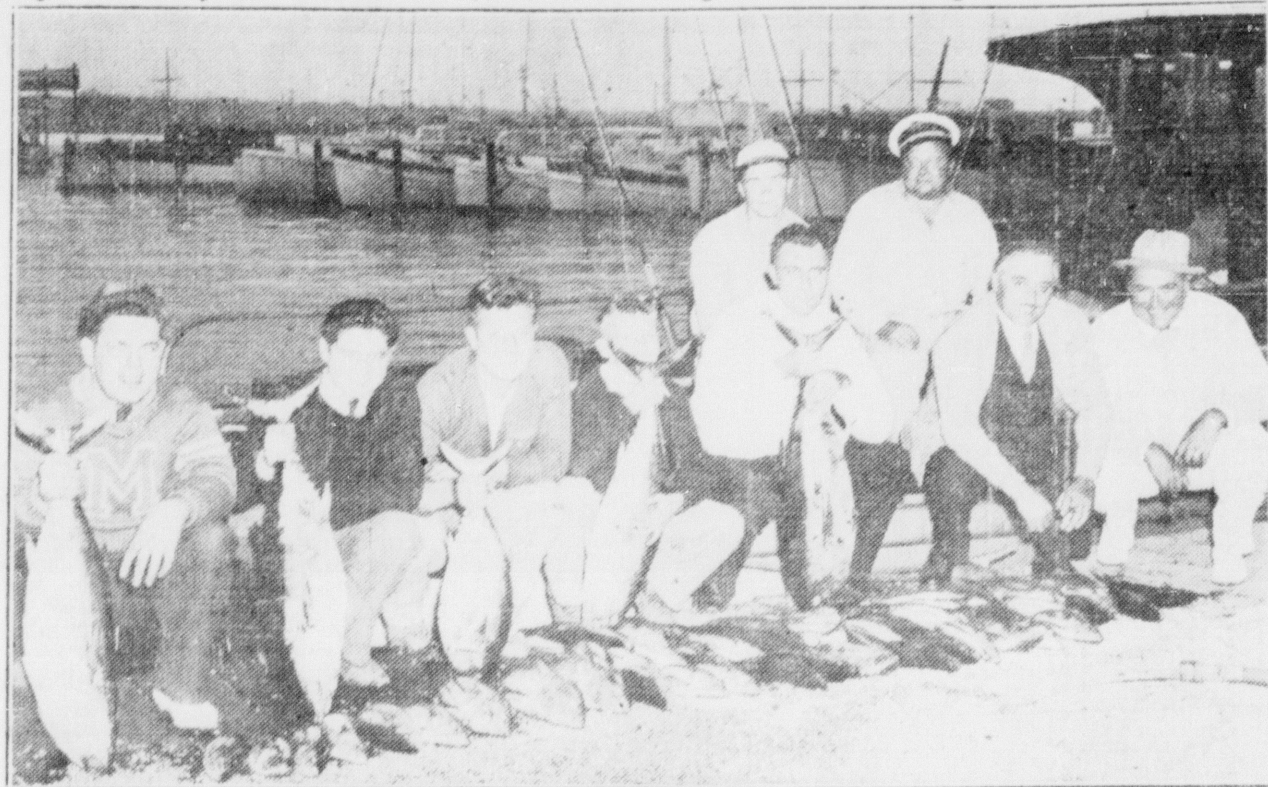

Budapest, Oct. 15 — Renewed reports of heavy Russian troop movements on the Bukovina-Romanian border have been received in Bucharest. It was learned here today.

The Soviet Legation in Bucharest admitted the troop movements in Bukovina but assured Romanian reporters that they had no aggressive designs. Soviet military commanders are merely carrying out routine reinforcement of the frontier forces, the Legation spokesman said.

Nevertheless there were persistent reports that the Soviets were heavily reinforcing their army and air forces along the Romanian border.

Large quantities of military supplies were reported to be arriving daily at the newly-acquired Bessarabian ports of Valcov, Burnas and Bugaz.

Russian Troop Penetration Unconfirmed

Britain Fighting "To Survive"

London, Oct. 15—Great Britain is fighting this war not merely to maintain the status quo in Europe but "in order to survive," Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today.

Victory, he added, is the most important goal for Great Britain now rather than any discussion as to the nature of Britain's war aims.

"We are fighting in order to survive," Churchill said. "When our capacity to do that is more generally recognized throughout the world, we shall be in a position to take the further view of what we shall do when victory has been won."

The time has not yet come, he said, when any official declaration can be made as to Britain's war aims beyond the very careful general statement already published.

"World opinion, so far as it is free, is thoroughly behind us," he added. "Danger lies in making any more specific statements at this time."

Churchill's statement was made in answer to a question by Samuel Silverman, Liverpool laborite, as to whether, anticipating the time when England would be able to assume a military offensive, the Government would state its war aims.

sonal estate of her husband, Robert Tobler, Durham township.

Gustav Black, Bedminster township farmer, who left a personal estate of $2,000 and real estate, including a 53-acre farm, named his widow, Matilda Black, Ottsville, R. D. No. 1, the sole heir.

Two daughters, Jessie V. Hillegass and Dorothy Jean Baker, have filed a caveat in the estate of their father, Wilmer Frederick Hillegass, of Quakertown, asking that no letters of administration be granted or a will probated without notifying them.

The widow, Emma J. Harr, 57 South Third street, Perkassie, was bequeathed without reservation the estate of her husband, Charles F. Harr, Perkassie, amounting to real estate holdings of $2,100. The will stipulated that the widow should serve as the executrix. Mrs. Lillian I. Stockburger, Upper Southampton township, who left a personal estate of $200 and real estate holdings valued at $3,750, named her husband, two sons and a daughter the heirs.

In a will, written January 14, 1939, Mrs. Stockburger named her husband, George Stockburger, the inheritor of the income of a trust fund, and at his death three children will share the estate. In a codicil, executed January 16, 1939, Mrs. Stockburger directed that a son, Alfred, should receive a certain share in case of the death of Lillian. The three children are George, Alfred and Lillian I. Stockburger.

closed tomorrow, teachers of the public schools in many districts will be available for service, or have already been assigned to definite polling places where the men between the ages of 21 and 36 will enroll.

A request for three teachers to aid at the Lower East polling district of Bensalem Township has resulted in assignment of Messrs. John Slaven, Lynn Taylor and Franklin Meyer to that task. If other requests are received in that township, teachers will be assigned to duty. Members of the faculty will appear at the polling places, it is announced, ready to aid if called upon.

In Bristol Township some election boards have asked for teacher assistance, with the result that 14 have been assigned to work at the Maple Shade school for the day, the only district in Bucks County where the regular polling place is not being used for the draft. Those who will serve at Maple Shade building are: Henry Morgan, Walter Miller, Mrs. Mildred Slaughter, Miss Ethel Kines, Miss Mildred Conell, Leroy Wiser, Mrs. Rouzer, Miss Velda Thompson, Miss Edna Penny-packer, Miss Caroline Black, Miss Kathryn Griffie, Mrs. Mary Devine, Miss Louise Stewart, Andrew Jackson. In Bristol Township, lower second district, six teachers were requested to help with the work, and those assigned from the Croydon school faculty are: the Misses Orpha Wetzler, Anna Kirby, Leona Beck, Glenda Connor, Estelle Rauch, and Mrs. Kathleen Beck.

In Tullytown Borough the following teachers will assist in the work: Mrs. Marion Bloomfield, Miss Elsie Ettinger and Miss Dora Thompson.

Ernest H. Harvey, clerk of the Bucks County Commissioners, today announced that the Dublin Election Board will serve tomorrow when the National Selective Service Draft registrations are made at the polling place.

The Judge of Election of Dublin informed Clerk Harvey of their desire to serve after refusing because of the Mennonite beliefs.

"The action at first was entirely a personal matter, but after reconsidering it we have decided to serve as a board," said the Judge of Elections.

The registration tomorrow in Fallsington will be held in the Falls Township school building rather than in the two polling places, as previously announced.
